Gallery hosts Tamworth artist

TAMWORTH artist Bronwyn Woodley Graham will have her work on show at the Tamworth Regional Art Gallery when Shifting Light opens tonight.

The exhibition, which explores light in painting, will be opened by regional arts development officer for Arts North West Jane Kreiss and will show until April 3.

Bronwyn is best known for her emotive, luminescent landscapes and her work in portraiture.

Her works follow the traditional technique of layering in transparent and opaque pigments with warm to cool colours, giving a tonal depth and mix of both optical and direct colour.

"I have an eternal fascination with light: the effects with various pigments, the source and colour of the light, and the way in which it either falls on or emanates from various subjects," she said.

"I often use stark tonal values, enhancing space, depth and the illusion of the three dimensional within a two dimensional plane."
